

NEAR RIOTS MARK START OF WYNEKOOP TRIAL

SPRATT DAMAGE SUIT REACHES THE ARGUMENTS

Rebuttal Evidence Is Presented During This Afternoon

Presentation of testimony before the jury in the Circuit Court by the plaintiff in the John Spratt damage case against County Superintendent of Highways Fred W. Leake and the five members of the road and bridge committee of 1932, ended late yesterday afternoon and the jury was excused until 9:30 this morning when the defense began to present its witnesses.

County Clerk, Fred C. Dimick and County Treasurer Sterling D. Schrock were the first to be called and several of their records were introduced. Frank Hall of Franklin Grove was the first witness to the accident, he having followed the Spratt truck onto the Crombie Lane bridge. The witness testified that his car slid down the floor of the bridge after it collapsed, turned over on its side and that he crawled out of a window. He walked over to the wrecked truck and saw the driver in the cab. The driver of the truck appeared to be dead, he stated. He left the scene and summoned a doctor and then returned to the bridge where he saw the man removed from the truck cab and recognized the body as that of John Spratt. Two girders of the structure, the witness testified, were examined by him and found to be almost rusted through, only a small portion showing a fresh break. One small girder crashed through the cab of the truck and this the witness presumed caused Spratt's death.

Upon cross examination by Attorney Clyde Smith, who with State's Attorney Edward Jones is appearing for the defense, the witness stated that the truck slowed down before going on the bridge structure and that the Spratt truck did not strike any part of the south approach of the bridge structure.

Pictures Introduced

Frank Senger of Franklin Grove was the next witness and several photographs taken on the day following the collapse of the bridge by him, were introduced as exhibits for the plaintiff.

Mrs. Maude Spratt, widow of the victim of the tragic accident, testified that her husband operated a fleet of stock trucks and that she acted as bookkeeper for him. She estimated his average monthly earnings at $150 per month, her testimony concluded by her stating that her husband was 45 years of age and in perfect health at the time of the accident.

Will Miller of Franklin Grove, who was probably the first to arrive at the scene of the bridge crash, testified that he had difficulty in stopping his car because of the slippery condition of the roadway when he observed that the floor of the bridge had fallen. He went to the scene and observed Mr. Spratt's lifeless body in the cab of his truck and on examining the bridge girders, discovered one of them to be almost rusted through.

Bridge Re-planked

William Brucker, veteran member of the County Board of Supervisors, who served as the representative from China township from 1928 to 1931 and as a member of the road and bridge committee in 1929 and 1930, was called by the plaintiff's attorneys. He testified that in the spring of 1932 in the presence of other members of the county road and bridge committee, he called the attention of County Superintendent of Highways Fred Leake to the condition of the flooring of the bridge in question. He recommended re-planking of the structure, which was done. Later he testified, he reported to the County Superintendent of Highways that the bridge rattled, and was in a shaky condition, and at that time advised placing planks lengthwise to prevent vibration.

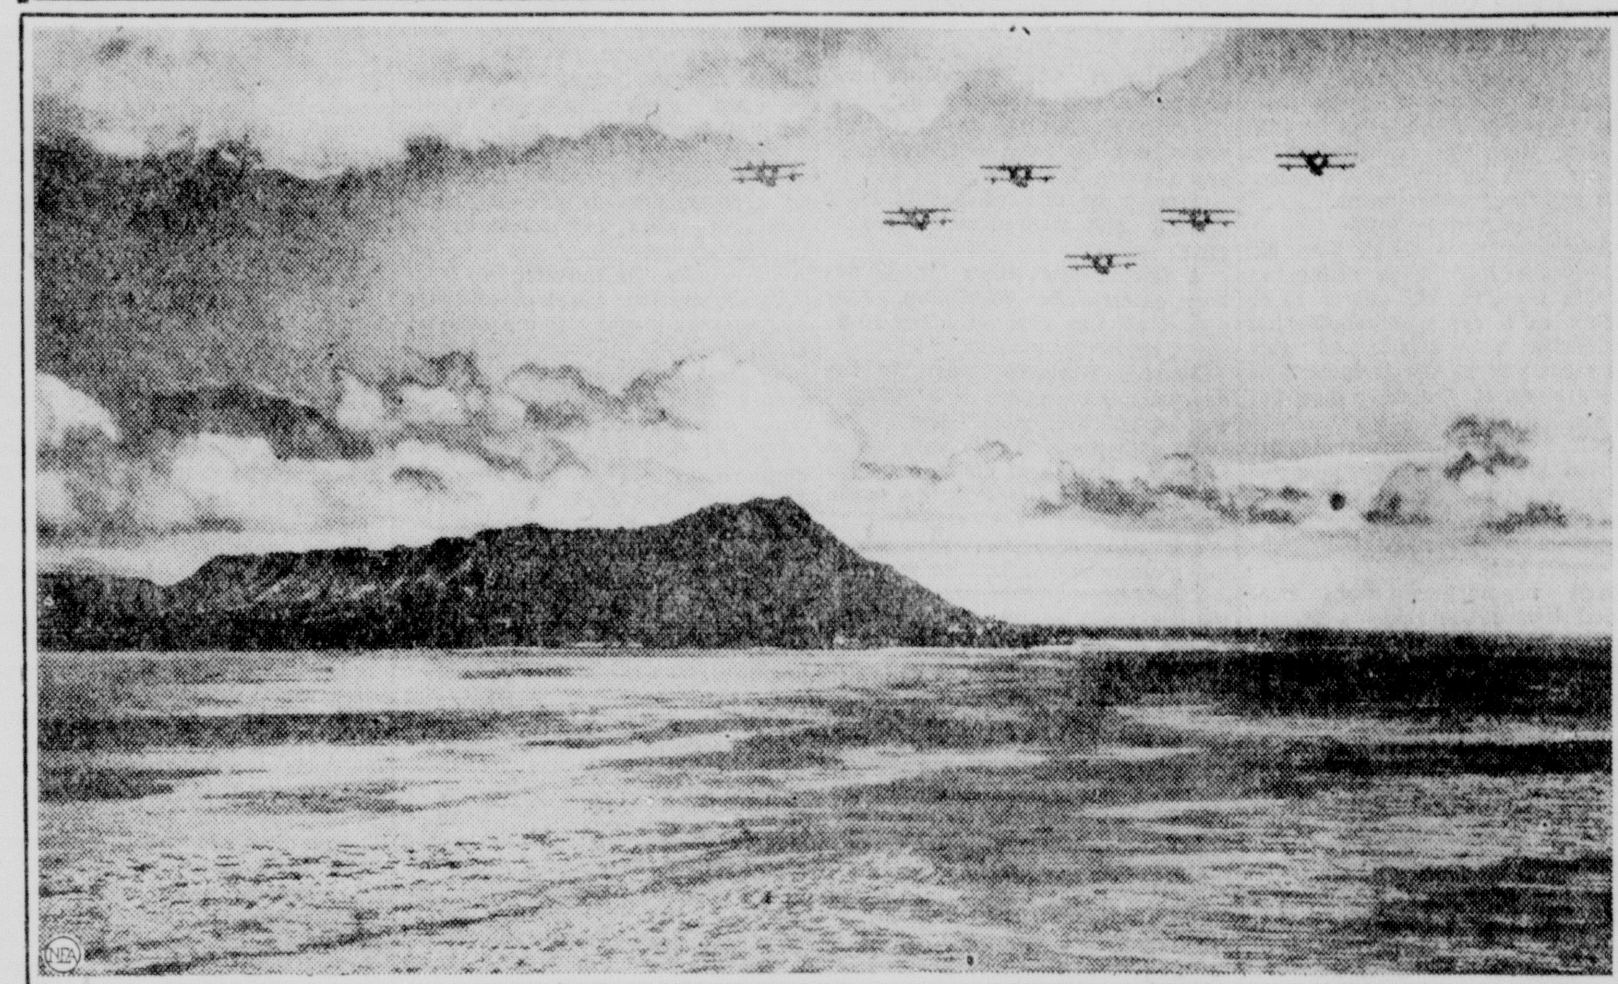

The witness testified that the Superintendent of Highways informed him that to do this would incur too great an expense on the structure and that Mr. Leake suggested that the old plank be used for this purpose. When notified that the old plank were in too worn a condition to be of any use, the witness stated that the Superintendent suggested the placing of

Additional CWA Projects For Dixon and Amboy Approved By State Director This Morning

Supplemental applications for three CWA projects in Dixon and Amboy have been approved, according to word received today by County Certifying Officer J. E. Reagan at the Welfare headquarters. One project provides for an additional expenditure of $9,648.00 for labor in the moving of stone from quarries; a second calls for the expenditure of $3,550 for labor and $375 for crusher rental; and the third for $3,000 for labor and $300 for material for the cleaning

U. S. Navy Planes Nearing Goal

'Finish Line' of Navy Flyers' 2400-Mile Pacific Hop

JOBLESS DIXON MAN TRIED TO END HIS LIFE

Wilbur Welch Shot Self Above Heart Last Night

Wilbur Welch, aged 26, residing at 1123 Highland avenue, despondent over being unable to secure employment, attempted suicide at his home last night about 11:30, when he fired one shot from a 22 caliber revolver into his left side, the bullet entering his body above the heart and lodging below the collar bone. His wife arrived at home about the time that he fired the weapon.

Chief of Police Van Bibber and Patrolman Glessner were summoned to the home and had the victim removed to the Katherine Shaw Bethel hospital, where an x-ray examination located the bullet. His condition today was reported to be very promising and his early recovery was expected unless infection develops. It was expected that the bullet would be removed later.

Mr. and Mrs. Welch have been living in quarters which have been fitted up for living purposes in the barn belonging to Ben Rolph, in the rear of his residence at 1123 Highland avenue. Welch, who came to Dixon some time ago from Belvidere, was at home alone at the time. He is reported to have made several attempts to secure employment on some of the Civil Works projects recently. He was fully dressed when the officers arrived and had opened his clothing before firing the shot. There were but two bullets in the gun, which was taken in charge by Chief Van Bibber.

Extra! Extra! Sun Shines in Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 11—(AP)—The sun rose today at 7:17 A. M. This happens to be news in Chicago for news is the unusual.

The sun has not given Chicago even a side glance since Jan. 4, and then only a shy one.

There had been less than four hours of sunshine since Dec. 29. But Sol was back on the job today, maybe not for long, since rain or snow are Friday's dish.

Argyria is a peculiar disease which turns the skin a grayish-blue; long continued use of medicines containing silver salts bring it on.

THREE AURORA FIREMEN DIED IN FIRE TODAY

Four Others are Hurt in $125,000 Blaze in Woolworth Store

Aurora, Ill., Jan. 11—(AP)—Three fire captains were killed and four persons, two of them firemen, were injured early today as fire destroyed the three-story building occupied by the Woolworth five and ten cent store here at an estimated loss of $125,000.

The bodies of Captains Edward Rees and John Peterson were recovered from the ruins after the fire had been brought under control. The body of Charles Hoffman was sought in the basement.

Trapped by Wall

The three captains and the injured persons were trapped by a falling wall which imperiled the lives of hundreds of spectators. Peterson and Hoffman had entered the basement wearing gas masks a few minutes before the wall collapsed, burying them under tons of debris.

The injured were firemen Burgholzer and Barney Melisch, policeman Frank Carroll and Alfons Van Heck, a spectator. All were taken to hospitals and the condition of Burgholzer was reported to be the most serious of the group.

The fire, of undetermined origin, broke out about midnight and all fire fighting equipment in the city was called to the scene.

Farmer Is Hero

One of the heroes in the spectacular fire today was Joseph Keller, a farmer who became a volunteer fireman.

Keller told of being in the burning building when suddenly he was blown through a door by the crash of the front wall.

Picking himself up he dashed back into the midst of the scene and rescued two firemen, later he was lowered by a rope to the basement of the smoldering ruins where he aided in the recovery of one of the fire captain's bodies.

Three Adrift in Boat for 36 Hours Rescued this Morn

Kenosha, Wis., Jan. 11—(AP)—Three fishermen adrift on Lake Michigan more than 36 hours in their motor boat, the White Flier, were rescued early today 40 miles west and north of Waukegan, Ill., by Coast Guards here.

They were towed to shore in their boat the motor of which had broken down Tuesday afternoon a few hours after they set out from Waukegan. From then until the time of their rescue they drifted at the mercy of the waves.

Those in the party were Captain Frank Reckendorf, 53; Jack Johnson, 62, both of Waukegan; and Ernest Peters of Zion, Ill. They appeared little the worse for their experience.

Terse Items of News Gathered in Dixon During Day

MUSICIANS TO MEET

Officers of Dixon local American Federation of Musicians will be chosen at a meeting of the union to be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Woodmen hall.

MEET IN NELSON

Two meetings for farmers of Nelson township on the hog and corn program were announced today. Farmers residing in the west half of the township will meet at the Cook school Saturday afternoon at 1:30. A similar meeting for farmers residing in the east section of the township will be held at the Hill school on Saturday, Jan. 20 at 1:30 in the afternoon.

ROBBERY WELFARE

Persons apparently well acquainted with the rooms occupied by the Lee County Welfare headquarters on Hennepin avenue and River street, removed a glass from the basement window on Hennepin avenue during the night and entered the building. Several sacks of flour were reported to have been taken and these were carried out of the main entrance door. The robbery was discovered this morning at 6:20 by one of the employees at the headquarters and was reported to the police, who are conducting an investigation.

BLASTS BROKE WINDOWS

Police were called to the stone quarry on the county tuberculosis sanatorium property just east of the city limits yesterday afternoon, where blasting was reported to have shattered several windows. One blast during the forenoon and another about 3 o'clock in the afternoon were reported to have thrown pieces of stone almost two blocks distant, breaking windows in residences and in the Standard Oil service station and the windshield of one automobile. Frank Hughes of this city is in charge of the operation of the quarry, the stone from which is being used on CWA projects in Dixon.

NEARLY A FIRE

That Telegraph readers got their papers this evening may be due to the fact that John Cornwell, assistant to Walter Preston, got up before breakfast this morning, and was wide awake as he stood in the front window of the Preston establishment, directly across E. First street from The Telegraph office. For he saw smoke and flames coming from the arway at one of The Telegraph's basement windows and at once called us up to tell us our building was on fire. The flames, evidently caused by someone dropping a lighted cigarette or cigar into the arway, had started burning the wooden window casing, but were extinguished without the aid of the fire department.

Canton, Ill., Jan. 11—(AP)—Frank Beades poured kerosene on a cook stove this morning. The resulting flare set the room afire, burned Beades to death and burned his wife and three children seriously.

IMPROVEMENT IN LOWELL PARK IS VERY EXTENSIVE

Much Work Is Being Done There By Men Working for CWA

Lowell Park visitors this season will find a number of important improvements made possible under the CWA program, all of which add materially to the beauty and utility of the grounds. At the entrance two huge posts have been built of native stone, each eight feet square at the base and 13 feet high.

In the park all roads have been widened where it was deemed necessary and those roads which were not macadamized are being surfaced with crushed rock taken from the quarry in the park, the Board having in mind the ultimate treatment of every road with an asphalt coating. Already about a thousand cubic yards of crushed rock have been taken from the quarry and the project contemplates the removal and use of approximately 7000 cubic yards for the various improvements to be made.

The shelter house on the south lookout has been moved back about 25 feet from the road and a stone foundation has been erected for it. The board expects to erect at least five more stone shelters throughout the grounds before the work is completed. Banks along the roads have been rip-rapped with stone where necessary and about half a mile of new roadway has been opened up through the pinetum.

Two Trucks Figure in Accidents Today in Ashton, Franklin

A truck carrying 34 hogs belonging to Ernest Lind of Morrison was badly wrecked last evening on the streets of Ashton, while traveling east, when a rear wheel came off. The heavily loaded truck crossed the paving, snapped off a telephone pole, then struck a tree and turned over. The hogs were spilled out and several were injured.

The truck caught fire after turning over and the Ashton fire department was summoned to the scene and extinguished the blaze. A man and woman who were riding in the cab with the driver escaped with only minor injuries. The truck was badly damaged and after being righted, was taken to an Ashton garage.

One of the fleet of Belier bakery trucks driven by James Torrance of this city, was badly damaged about 5:30 this morning at the curve east of Franklin Grove on the Lincoln Highway. The truck was going east and in rounding the curve, skidded on the frost-covered paving, crashing into the guard rail fence and turning over. The driver sustained minor bruises to his right arm and leg. The load of bread was transferred to another truck which was sent to the scene of the wreck from Dixon and the damaged truck and injured driver brought back to Dixon.

The number of automobiles in Hungary increased from 5965 in 1924 to 24,250 in 1928.

WERE WITHIN 460 MILES OF PORT AT NOON

One of Ships "Lost" In Fog Twice During the Night

BULLETIN

San Francisco, Jan. 11—(AP)—The six Navy planes flying to Honolulu from San Francisco were within 385 miles of their goal at 1 P. M. (CST.) today, the Twelfth Naval District headquarters announced. The planes were roaring along at 92 miles an hour.

San Francisco, Jan. 11—(AP)—Only 460 miles from its goal at Honolulu, the squadron of Navy planes flying from San Francisco reported at 12 noon CST., today that it was hearing the mine-sweeper Pelican, the last guard ship stationed along the ocean route. Navy officers here said the six planes apparently had increased their flying speed considerably.

San Francisco, Jan. 11—(AP)—Six United States Navy seaplanes, in the first mass flight to Hawaii, skimmed steadily toward a promised fair landing at the "Paradise of the Pacific" today.

"Bright sunshine" and a helpful tail wind for the end of the 2400-mile flight from San Francisco was the wireless forecast sent to the six officers and 24 men aboard the flying patrol boats.

The six silver-winged planes, which streaked out through San Francisco's Golden Gate at 4:22 P. M. CST., yesterday after a difficult take-off from the bay with their heavy loads, roared swiftly through the night.

Bucked Wind, Fog

By 2:55 A. M. CST., after bucking headwinds for the first 600 miles of the flight and encountering a short but dense fog belt, the squadron had covered more than half of the longest all-over-water route ever tackled in a mass flight. The report at that hour on the flight by Navy headquarters here gave the planes' distance from the Golden Gate as 1220 miles.

For half an hour last night, the squadron tore through a blinding fog during which one of the craft, 10-P5, piloted by Lieutenant John Perry of Greenville, S. C., became temporarily "lost." The 10-P5 rejoined the squadron just after it cleared the fog belt and passed over the destroyer Schenck, "standing by" approximately 600 miles from San Francisco.

"Lost" Second Time

Messages picked up by the naval station here shortly before midnight said Lieutenant Perry's plane had become separated from the others again. He notified Lieutenant

Principal In Murder Mystery Trial in Chicago

Dr. Alice Wynkoop

Chicago, Jan. 11—(AP)—The cast in the Wynkoop murder trial: Dr. Alice Wynkoop, 63, the defendant, a slight, wisp of a woman who is painted a martyr by her family and a cold-blooded mercenary slayer by the prosecution. Judge Joseph B. David, 70, a fiery veteran of more than 17 years on the bench who as presiding judge has announced he will tolerate no nonsense by either side.

Charles S. Dougherty, 41, black-haired, piercing-eyed prosecutor, who will seek to convict Dr. Wynkoop as his 38th major conviction within a year.

W. W. Smith, defense attorney, who was an associate of Clarence Darrow, brilliant criminal lawyer, has been on the "inside" of many notable court victories.

Frank J. Tyrrell, 43, associated with Smith as defense counsel, who says he has never lost a case for a woman client.

Earle Wynkoop, 27, tall, red-haired husband of the slain Rheta, in whose extra-marital love affairs the prosecution claims to see a possible murder motive.

Dr. Catherine Wynkoop, 24, attractive daughter and medical partner of Dr. Alice Wynkoop, who has proclaimed her constant faith in her mother's innocence.

Walker Wynkoop, elder brother of Earle, a young business man who has been the spokesman of the family since the incarceration of his mother.

Bernard Gardner, thin-faced, gray-eyed father of Rheta, who aided police in their early efforts to solve the operating-room death mystery.

FUGITIVE FROM LEE COUNTY IS SENT TO PRISON

Gilbert Thorpe Gets Year-to-Life In Reformatory

Gilbert Thorpe, aged 18, of Moline, was yesterday sentenced to the Illinois reformatory at Pontiac to serve a sentence of from one year to life by Judge Nels A. Larson in the Rock Island county circuit court when he pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with robbery while armed with a dangerous weapon.

Thorpe will be remembered as one of five prisoners who made a successful break for liberty from the Lee county jail last August 30, when they dug through the south corridor wall. Three of the number were under indictment and the other two were held for investigation. The three who were indicted are back in custody, two having been sentenced by courts and the third awaiting trial in the local county jail.

Kenneth Carlson, pal of Thorpe, was sentenced from Bloomington on a charge of armed robbery. His sentence was from one year to life. Thorpe has received a similar sentence and while he asked to be delivered to the state penitentiary at Joliet where Carlson is held, the court denied the request because of his age. Ernest McCabe, third member of the escaped gang of prisoners is now confined to a cell in the county jail here and is

HUNDREDS TRY TO CROWD INTO THE COURTROOM

Public to Be Barred from Further Sessions Of Trial

Criminal Courts Building, Chicago, Jan. 11—(AP)—Amid scenes of near-rioting as hundreds of spectators fought for entrance to the court, Dr. Alice Wynkoop went on trial for her life today in the death of Mrs. Rheta Gardner Wynkoop, 33, her daughter-in-law.

The jostling, pushing, and frequent violence of the crowd caused Judge Joseph B. David to order the building cleared and Chief Bailiff James Gabriel announced the public would be excluded from the remainder of the trial.

Progresses Slowly

Selection of a jury after Dr. Alice had pleaded not guilty proceeded slowly and indications at the noon recess were that two days or more might be required to complete it.

The second venireman examined, Thomas Ryan, unemployed, was excused for cause. He said he had formed an opinion of Dr. Wynkoop's guilt or innocence.

When another venireman, Ernest Buetell, said he never had served on a jury, Judge David said, "well, son, you're due."

Only about 125 of the crowd that jammed the corridors and filled a stairway for three flights were allowed to enter the court.

Earle Wynkoop Not In Courtroom

Chicago, Jan. 11—(AP)—Conspicuously absent from the courtroom where his mother was being tried for his wife's murder today was Earle Wynkoop.

For a week his whereabouts have been unknown. Police watched the Wynkoop mansion for several days, hoping in vain to nab him and pose one more important question before the trial of his mother began. Earle himself once accused of some participation in the plot but freed by his alibi, was not on the roster of witnesses made public in court. He has not been subpoenaed by the prosecution, and the defense declined to discuss his absence.

The remainder of the space, about half of the high ceilinged, dark paneled court, was filled with veniremen.

Judge Spurs Lawyers

Behind his high desk, Judge David, severe of countenance, paced back and forth, inserting caustic remarks at frequent intervals to speed examination of the veniremen.

Dr. Alice's expression seldom changed, except when she peered over her shoulder and through the rear door of the court, her attention attracted by screams and shouts among the mob of eager fans.

Her features composed but her face a ghastly white, she sat calmly at her counsel's table. Her expression did not change when Assistant State's Attorney Charles Dougherty asked the first venireman whether he had any scruples against inflicting the death penalty if the woman physician were found guilty. The venireman replied in the negative.

Nor did she show any expression except one of intense interest when Dougherty recounted the charges in the indictment against her. The prosecutor said that the state would prove that Rheta, talented young violinist, came to her death at the willful hands of her mother-in-law.

Recanted Details

Dougherty recounted how Rheta's body was found in the basement surgical room of the Wynkoop mansion last Nov. 21. He said he would prove Rheta died from a bullet wound through her heart, from an overdose of chloroform, or from a combination of both.

Another outbreak of rioting among women jammed in the corridors seeking entrance to the court caused Judge David to shout an order for the building to be cleared. Extra deputies again were called, and began evicting court fans which by that time numbered several thousand.

A court recess was taken until

Anonymous Note Directs Chicago Man To Body of His Son, Shot to Death While Attempting a Holdup

Chicago, Dec. 11—(AP)—It was just anonymous note that Max Finkel received from a neighbor boy, but its ominous contents proved true. The note said: "Go to the county morgue and you will find your son there."

Finkel went to the morgue yesterday and identified a body as that of his 18-year-old son, Alexander. He had been shot to death the night before by Policeman Martin Pregnitz of Naperville, Ill., when he said the youth attempted to rob him and his young woman companion as they sat in an automobile in front of her house.

Finkel said his son left home two days before Christmas. He said the youth who handed him the note told him a woman he did not know gave him a dime for delivering it.

THE CRICKET

SI I was going home one day I heard a tiny cricket

Singing in his grassy home In a hidden thicket.

"Good day, Sir Cricket," I remarked;

"Good day to you," said he, And then he stopped his little song Just to talk to me.

"What do you do with all your time, And do you work or play?" I asked, for I was curious To hear what he would say.

"Sometimes I give a ball," said he, "And all my cousins come; Grasshoppers, beetles, ants and bees— It causes quite a hum."

"The bees bring honey for the feast, Grasshoppers play and sing; The ants and beetles do their tricks, And walk a tight-rope string."

"We also have much work to do: We have to find our food, And store it up for winter days As all good crickets should."

"I am surprised," I said, "to find Your habits so like mine; I also like to have my friends Come in to play and dine."

Next time I go out walking The fields, and chance to see A cricket anywhere, I'll know That he's a lot like me!

—Eleanor A. Chaffee.

Is Making Good As News Reporter

Washington, Jan. 11.—(AP)—

Katrina McCormick, pretty and talented daughter of Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, has just turned newspaper reporter in this city where she made a dazzling debut; where she took prizes in society horse shows.

Her first published story, appearing without a "by-line," told of encountering difficulty on a doorstep of importance—even as other girl reporters.

It recounted repertorial shivering outside the home of Boris Skvinsky, serving at the moment as the Russian ambassador, when she sought to interview Mesdames Khristantov and Gokham, wives of attaches just arrived from Russia.

The Soviet government failed to recognize the granddaughter of Mark Hanna, once considered quite a boss around here. But with perseverance the former debutante got her story just the same.

THE SCHOOL LUNCH

Try to plan tasty and filling menus for the school children's lunch boxes. For sandwich fillings, you can use peanut butter softened with cream and butter, cream cheese mixed with cream and daisies, sliced or diced meat or fowl combined with celery or lettuce and raisins or prunes mixed with broken nuts. These fillings can be used for white or Graham bread, but it is better to have several of each kind. Wrap the sandwiches in waxed paper to preserve their freshness.

Fruit, one or two kinds, should be included in each lunch box and with a sweet such as cookie, cake, candy bar, dates or raisins and some milk or cocoa a substantial as well as tempting lunch can be packed.

"The Voters' Handbook" Is Popular

Will the inflationists in Congress win? Will Congress try to retrieve some of the extraordinary powers given President Roosevelt and exercised by him during the past few months? What response will the President receive to his pronouncement of non-intervention in a Latin-American country by a single power? What are the proposals of the Director of the Budget Douglas and has he a chance of success? These and a multitude of other questions challenge the interest of every American at the beginning of this new session of Congress. The League of Women Voters and other citizens wait to see what the Representatives and Senators will do about the many perplexing problems facing both the legislative and executive branches of the government.

The League of Women Voters has a wealth of information of value to interested citizens. It makes no claim to skill at crystal gazing or prophecy but if one wants details about legislation passed or proposed or interested in the mechanics of government itself—the League will probably have it. An extremely active interest in local political problems by the League of Women Voters is evidenced by the enthusiastic reception of its publication "The Voters' Handbook" which has exhausted its first edition after only a few weeks on the market. Professors, politicians, and civic leaders have joined the average voter in praise of this valuable compact book which is ably described as "A college course for thirty-five cents."

So the new year has come with interest and League of Women Voters members and friends watch its advent with curiosity and concern, some with apprehension, and some with eager expectation, and some with well founded hope.

NOW IT'S A TABLE... NOW A CUPBOARD

Transformation of Dual Purpose Piece Is Effected Without Moving Articles on Shelves

By NEA Service—

Modern furniture is designed to give maximum service and at the same time to occupy a minimum amount of space. Apartment dwellers have neither the room nor the desire for numerous pieces of furniture. With them in mind, furniture designers have made handsome pieces which serve a dual purpose. Women with larger homes like the new ideas, too.

For instance, there is a cupboard (right) which, with a simple pull, can be made into a dining table (below.) This is a particularly good piece for a one-room apartment which has to be turned from living room into dining room.

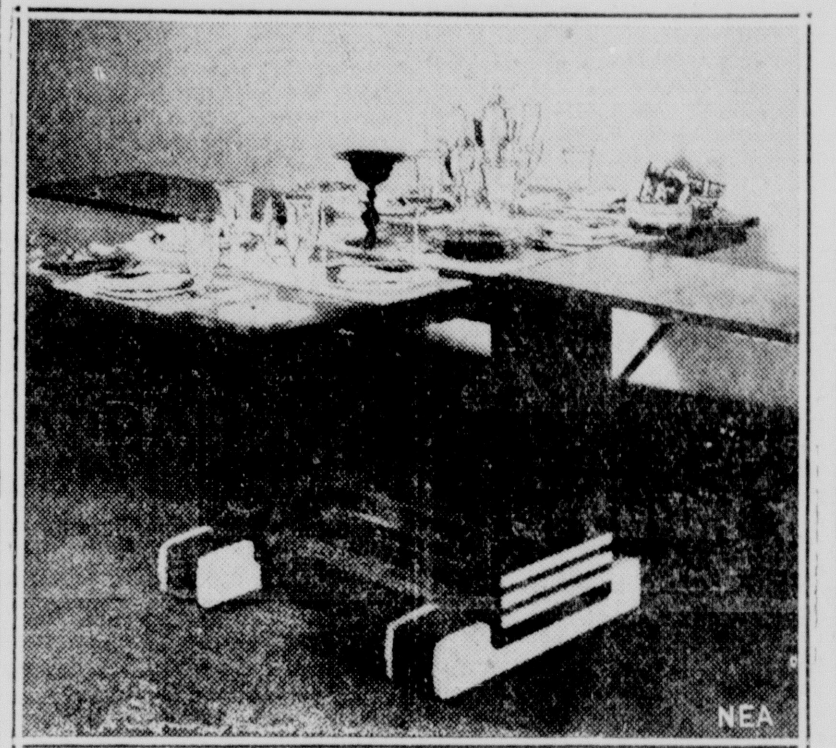

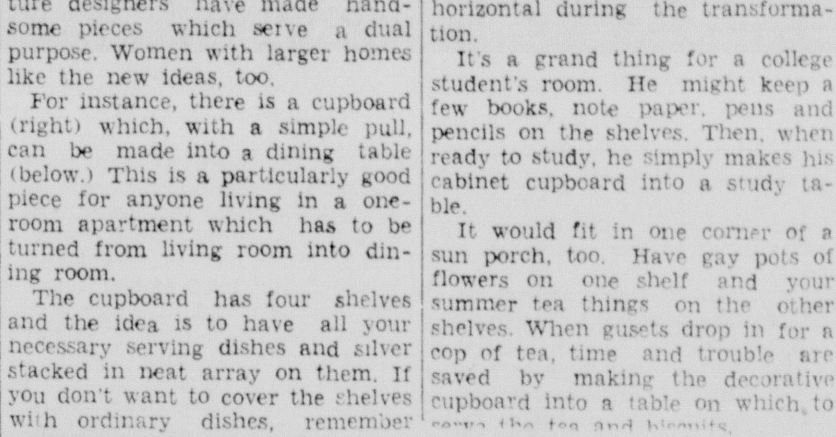

The cupboard has four shelves and the idea is to have all your necessary serving dishes and silver stacked in neat array on them. If you don't want to cover the shelves with ordinary dishes, remember that your handsomest bowls, vases and the like need just such a place.

When you are ready for a table, unlatch a little catch, pull gently and there you have a dining table which can be locked so that it becomes rigid. The dinnerware stays arranged as it was on the shelves, since the shelves remain perfectly horizontal during the transformation.

It's a grand thing for a college student's room. He might keep a few books, note paper, pens and pencils on the shelves. Then, when ready to study, he simply makes his cabinet cupboard into a study table.

It would fit in one corner of a sun porch, too. Have gay pots of flowers on one shelf and your summer tea things on the other shelves. When guests drop in for a cup of tea, time and trouble are saved by making the decorative cupboard into a table on which, to save the tea and blooms,

A four-shelf cupboard (above) in modern design holds plates, glasses and silver. By unlatching a catch and pulling gently, you have a table (left) which will seat six persons.

Ideal Club Host To The Practical Club Last Evening

The members of the Practical Club were guests of the Ideal Club Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. O. F. Goeke, 616 N. Dixon avenue.

Before announcing the program for the evening, Mrs. Charles Swin, president of the Ideal Club, made some "practical" and "ideal" remarks concerning the happy social relations existing between the two clubs.

The first part of the program consisted of delightful musical numbers by two very talented local artists, Miss Naomi Wolf, pianist; and Russell Mason, flutist, and was as follows:

Polichinelle ..... Rachmaninoff

Miss Wolf

"Le Pappillon" ..... Koehler

Valise Caprice ..... Howe

Pastorelle ..... Desportes

Mr. Mason

A one act play, "Sardines," was then given by a group of young women from Amboy. The cast of characters:

Mattie Eaton, an attractive woman of middle age—Miss Lucille Keefe.

Anne Carroll, her fashionable guest from New York—Mrs. Ruby Holliday.

Lizzie Pike, whose voice is as sharp as her tongue—Miss Anne Miller.

Lucy Watkins, whose deafness has made of her quite a wistful little person—Miss Clara Klapprodt.

Alfreda, Mattie's clumsy melancholy helper—Miss Eleanor Shaw.

The play depicted life in a fishing port in Maine and was full of comical as well as pathetic situations, and the performers admirably carried out the characters portrayed.

The program was concluded by a piano number by Miss Wolf, a waltz by Rachmaninoff.

Mrs. H. D. Bills, president of the Practical club, expressed the appreciation of the guests for a very happy evening. Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Goeke, assisted by the committee who planned the program, Mesdames L. W. Miller, Henry Leydig, Lloyd Lewis.

Mrs. Sarsfield of Atlantic, Ia., mother of the hostess, and Mrs. A. G. Burnham, were also guests.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, making when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Rosent's substitute. 25¢ each drug store. ©1931 C. M. Co.

SACRIFICE OF POLITICS TO LASTING HONOR.

Probably the most significant single thing about Mayor LaGuardia's inaugural in New York was his blunt prediction: "I never shall be re-elected."

That brief remark, taken in conjunction with the new mayor's policies, contains a whole volume of commentary on municipal politics as it is practiced in America.

The reasons for the new mayor's pessimistic prediction are simple.

He aims to give New York a clean and efficient administration. He is going to reduce the number of city employees by approximately 10,000.

He is going to cut salaries, abolish useless boards and commissions, consolidate city departments, and the reign of graft in the letting of contracts and the buying of supplies, remove politics from the police department.

He is going, in short, to do those simple things which obviously and indisputably are proper for a mayor to do.

But we have built up the kind of system in our municipal politics which makes it very unlikely that any administration can do those very proper and necessary things and win re-election.

To succeed in American municipal politics, as a general thing, a mayor of a great city must consent to a certain amount of inefficiency, a certain amount of favoritism, and a certain amount of outright corruption in his government.

The extent to which he puts up with those things varies from city to city, naturally; but the man who, like LaGuardia, boldly proposes to abolish them entirely is a great rarity, and he takes it for granted at the start that he cannot be re-elected.

We have had a great deal of talk in the last year about a "new deal," about a new spirit that is entering our conduct of national affairs. Nowhere do we need such change any more than in our system of local government.

We need not only politicians who are courageous enough to put principle above the success of their own careers; we need a public opinion that will support such men when they do appear, and give them the backing they must have.

The piping times in which money was so plentiful that we could afford to support wasteful and grafting city governments have gone, and there is not much chance that they will return soon.

It is up to us to cut cloth to suit our purse; to hunt for and support politicians willing to take office with the prediction, "I never shall be re-elected."

TO CHECK BLACKMAILING.

Senator Millard Tydings of Maryland plans to seek a modification of the famous Mann act in the present session of Congress.

This law was passed to strike a blow at the white slave traffic. Unfortunately, it also has been a boon to blackmailers. It is perfectly possible to prosecute under it a man who never has dreamed of having the shadow of a connection with the organized vice traffic; and unscrupulous folk have used this fact as a lever to extort money from men guilty of nothing more than indiscretions.

It goes without saying of course, that in revising the law care must be taken to leave it an effective against commercialized vice rings.

Senator Tydings believes it is possible to amend the law so as to destroy its usefulness for blackmailers without weakening its usefulness in the field for which it was designed. It is to be hoped that he succeeds in his plan.

DEATH FOR RECKLESS DRIVING.

Some sort of record for severity in dealing with reckless driving seems to have been set by the Russian court in Moscow, which recently imposed the death penalty on a motorist who let his car get out of control, careened into a marching column of troops, and caused the death of four men.

This sentence is all the more astounding when one considers the fact that, except in cases of counter-revolutionary activity, Russian courts are reluctant to impose the death penalty at all, even for cold-blooded murder.

It isn't likely that very many Americans would favor the adoption of such stringent measures in this country. Nevertheless, there is something to be said for the adoption of extreme severity toward the man who handles his car so poorly that he destroys the lives of his fellow men.

We have a lot of public menaces of that variety in America, and so far we do not seem to have found any very effective way of dealing with them.

I do not think it good practice for a government official or employee to accept gifts, even of small value, from those with whom he has business relations or with whom he may have business relations.—Assistant Secretary of Commerce Ewing Y. Mitchell.

A tremendous drive toward a world of peace and justice is growing out of mankind's misery.—Rabbi Stephen S. Wise.

The husky tugged at Scout's tail and then he barked real loud. "Well, hound, I hope that you don't get away from me. I guess you're very strong."

"You may run off with me, I fear. I'll play safe, and call Copy here. He'll help me hang on to the rope, so nothing will go wrong."

This chatter made the Eskimo laugh loudly. Then he said, "I know a better way to hold my dog. Just keep your eyes on me."

And then he clapped his hands and cried, "Hey, husky, run up to my side!" The dog obeyed and he seemed just as tickled as could be. "He's trained real well," was Doty's said. "Say, can I pat him on the head, or will it make him snap at me? He seems a friendly sort."

"Gee, don't you worry 'bout that hound," the Eskimo replied. "He's bound to like you and your petting him will be a lot of sport."

So Doty promptly walked right up and smilingly said, "Hi, there, pup!"

The dog began to wag his tail and then he barked real loud. "Why, we are friends already, Gee!" said Doty. "He is fond of me! I hope he is as nice to everybody in our crowd."

Just then the Eskimo's big dad yelled, "Here! This ought to make you glad. I've found a dandy sled. My youngster's hound will pull you all."

"Be sure you hitch him up just right, and do not fall to hang on tight. One sudden little jerk might make you take a dandy fall."

The Tinytinks all cried, "Hurrah! We'll soon be on our merry way!" The dog stood still, while being hitched. The whole bunch lent a hand.

Said Doty, "Oh what fun 'twill be. Right up in front's the place for me. We'll start out safe and sound, but goodness knows where we will land."

WEEKLY SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

BAPTISM AND TEMPTATION OF JESUS

By WM. E. GILROY

The baptism of Jesus marked the beginning of his distinctive ministry. This was the significance of baptism. It was a sort of initiation rite.

John the Baptist had such a consciousness of the greatness of the Messiah, whose forerunner he was, that he drew back from the honor of baptizing Jesus.

It seemed to him unfitting that one conscious of his weakness and inferiority should be the instrument of expressing the Divine Blessing and approval upon one so much greater than himself.

To Jesus, however, the rite had a significance independent of the man who performed it. It was a fulfillment of all righteousness. It was a part of that human process by which the divine mission of Jesus was to be realized.

Yet Jesus well may have rejoiced in his baptism at the hands of John, for he paid to John the highest tribute that could be paid to mortal man, when he said that among those born of women there had not arisen a greater than John the Baptist.

How essentially the baptism of Jesus was a part of the human ritual—a fulfillment of all righteousness in human terms and demands—was manifested very quickly in the experiences of the temptation.

The baptism did not set Jesus aside as apart from human life. It did not surround him with protective influences that were not vouchsafed to other men.

It emphasized only the divine career that he was to live in human surroundings and even in the midst of human temptations.

Here, again, was the fulfillment of all righteousness in the triumph of right over the promptings of evil and over the temptations of a lesser good. The temptations that assailed Jesus were no less real because they were not gross temptations of the flesh.

The temptation to command that stones should be made bread might be interpreted in terms of materialism and grossness. But it was more a temptation to use wonder-working power for insufficient or trivial ends than the temptation to trail the divine life in the mire of gross and material sins.

The temptations that assailed Jesus were the temptations that were more likely to assail a man called to a high commission. Probably the keenest temptations that a man has to combat are those that meet him on the plane of his noblest aspirations and his greatest abilities.

The temptation to the artist is to use his gift for something less than beauty and glory of his art, to prostitute it to base ends. The temptation of the poet is to be content with something less than the highest beauty of form and expression and the nearest approach to perfection that he can achieve.

The temptation of the man of organizing genius, or of statesman-like ability, is to use his organizing power, or his skill in the mastery and leadership of men, for worldly ambition or for his own aggrandizement.

It was the temptation of this sort that Jesus rejected. In fact, the real force of the temptation that assailed him may have had a deeper significance.

It may have been the temptation to work for a material and immediate triumph of his kingdom rather than to choose the path that led to the cross in his uncompromising service of the Truth.

This is a temptation that in some form assails us all, to refuse some sacrifice that truth and righteousness demand and to set aside some great goal, while at the same time we delude ourselves into thinking that the way of expediency is the way of better achievement.

Tempted men may learn from the failure of the Master's temptation, as well as find inspiration in his conquest of the tempter.

PILLAR OF SALT

By L. L. R.

Pioneer stories seem to always hold the interest of the average individuals. Somehow the adventure in those tales stirs the romantic emotions of all people. Among the pioneers, those identified with the winning of the West are dearest to the hearts of Americans.

Gone are those days, the days of territorial pioneers. There is no more virgin land in America; it has all been made a part of a great, plotted empire. Although there may be still a few scattered sections open for homesteading, the great bulk of the land is already an integral part of commercialized America.

Not many years ago, if a man made a failure in one place he could move on to another locality and, with the help of Nature, make a fresh start. If he failed in business, there was always the wood land, where he could at least find a living for himself and his family. If he failed there for reasons beyond his control, there was always good soil in "the land of beaming again."

All that is changed. The territorial trail blazers have vanished with yesterday. Modern civilization has produced people who would starve if they were turned loose in a virgin land to shift for themselves. But perhaps it is better so.

Civilization cannot turn back. The spirit which moved the territorial pioneers to forge constantly ahead still lives to fill Americans with the desire to push ever on and on—toward what we do not know, but on toward the unseen goal we all seek.

No, there is no new land where we can start again. We must be content to stand where we are and fight it out. But since this is true, we must make new plans; we must fight the battle for existence by use of new tactics, tactics better suited for the present than the old ones.

We can't leave our neighbors. We must stay with them and try to evolve a good plan of dealing with them so that we can live in peace. Their methods must interlock with ours. Our mutual eggs must mesh so that the machine of civilization will function.

Our neighbor may be a farmer; he must live or we can't. He may be an industrialist; he, too, must live or we will die. He may be a merchant, or a professional man. Whatever he is, he is a definite link in the endless chain our age has forged. Every link in this chain is indispensable.

The land of beginning again has disappeared. In its place is a complicated society. The pioneering is done, and we must now be content to accept the world we live in and plan to make it livable and then go on toward the mythical goal.

WHAT'S NEW IN PNEUMONIA?

Much progress has been made during recent years in our knowledge of the nature of pneumonia and the germs that cause it. Much too, has been accomplished in the production of potent sera against the disease.

By a variety of ingenious laboratory studies we have succeeded in establishing the identity of many so-called types of pneumococci. For while these germs of pneumonia have many gross characteristics in common they can be separated into 32 types, each having peculiar characteristics.

The importance in establishing the difference in the identities of the pneumococci lies in this: each type appears to have certain distinct toxic characters. Serum used to fight pneumonia germs will avail only against that type of germ for which it was produced.

When a case of pneumonia develops an effort is made to determine the identity of the germ causing the disease. This process is called typing.

When the type is known, a suitable serum, if available, can be employed. Serum against types 1, 2 and 7, the most common types is now available.

The issue of a case of pneumonia not only depends upon the type of germ causing it, and the resistance of the patient, but also upon whether the germ succeeds in invading the blood stream of the sufferer.

When the germ circulates in the blood, the outcome is liable to be more serious. Pneumonia serum appears to have an excellent effect upon exactly this condition, for when given promptly and in sufficient quantities it tends to clear the blood stream of the pneumococci.

The serum also appears to have detoxicant action. This is witnessed by the fact that its use is followed by a drop in temperature, pulse rate and respiration rate.

UNITED MINERS UNION WINS IN BOARD DECISION

Labor Board Upholds a Contract With Pea- body Coal Co.

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 11—(AP)—The Bituminous Coal Labor Board Division II, in a decision announced yesterday involving Peabody Coal Company mines at Harrisburg, Ill., upheld the contract between the United Mine Workers of America and the coal company to the exclusion of the Progressive Miners of America.

The mines involved are known as No. 47 and No. 43 and the decision was announced by Dr. John A. Lapp, chairman and presidential member of the board, who served with two other members, one as a representative of the operators and the other as a representative of the miners.

History Reviewed
The decision filled 10 typewritten pages and went back into the history of the controversy which originated when members of the Progressive union charged that they were discriminated against.

"The case involved the right of representation for collective bargaining purposes in this mine as between the United Mine Workers and the Progressive miners," the decision said. "From the evidence it appears that the mine had operated under a contract with the United Mine workers for several years past."

The signing of a new contract in August, 1932 was followed by protests from numerous groups of miners as being arbitrarily imposed, the statement said, "but it appears that the men in mine No. 47 and also in mine No. 43, at duly called meetings, ratified the contract and proceeded to work under it."

Contract Extended
Later the same year the contract was extended by the United union to April 1, 1933 as an emergency measure, while in the meantime the Progressive union had been organized in opposition to the older organization.

During February, 1933 the board said the Progressives claimed a majority of the miners in mine No. 47 and 43 struck when their demands for recognition were denied by the operator.

Since then the mines have remained closed except for a brief time when No. 43 was operated and then closed at the request of Governor Henry Horner because of mass violence.

"In support of the claim of the United Mine Workers it was pointed out that a valid contract had been entered into many months prior to the passage of the National Recovery Act and the bituminous coal code x x x and that to invalidate the contract was in violation of their constitutional right to have the obligations of their contract observed," the decision said.

On the other hand, the board said the Progressives claimed the contract was invalid because it was an unwarranted emergency measure, and because collective bargaining guarantees under the NRA were violated.

Complies With Code
"No claim was made that the contract in question is an oppressive contract," the decision said. "The provisions relating to hours, wages and working conditions were admitted to be in accordance with the bituminous coal code."

"The contract is, in fact, identical in language in its labor features, with the one which is used by the Progressives throughout the mines operated under their jurisdiction in Illinois."

As to the validity of the contract the board said it was up to a court of law to make a ruling and that "no case has been filed and no case is now pending in any court testing the validity of that contract."

Therefore, "the board respectfully submits that until this contract has been set aside by due process of law the board has no alternative but to accept the contract as lawful."

On the question of the right of collective bargaining the board ruled that where a contract or agreement was in force before the enactment of the NRA the application of section 7-A, so far as it relates to collective bargaining, cannot be required until the end of the contract or agreement period.

In conclusion the board ordered that its decision be accepted by the interested parties for a provisional period of not longer than six months, beginning January 8, 1934, on authority of article VII, section 5, sub-section B, of the bituminous coal code.

In 1930, foreign-born whites in the United States totaled 13,255,393.

U. S. MAY HAVE 50 STATES INSTEAD OF 48 ERE LONG

Propose Statehood for Hawaii and Puerto Rico This Session

Washington, Jan. 11.—(AP)—If some of the members legally accredited to Capitol Hill have their way the United States before long will have 50 instead of 48 states.

In fact, it was indicated today efforts to extend the Union to include Puerto Rico and Hawaii as the forty-ninth and fiftieth states may come before the present session of Congress.

Delegates McCandless of Hawaii said Hawaiians, with a state-sized population of 380,000, felt that their territory had completed all the requirements for legal entry into the Union and that success in persuading the Senate to admit a delegate from Hawaii would determine his position in pressing for statehood at the current session.

Asks Senate Delegate
Hawaii's non-voting delegate in the House together with Delegate Dimond of Alaska, have a proposal to extend their privileges to the Senate as well, now resting before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The Hawaiian statehood matter previously has achieved some favorable consideration, but in the last session bitterness that grew out of the Massie-Fortescue murder case thwarted further efforts.

Commissioner Iglesias of Puerto Rico says any move to bring that heavily populated island into the Union will await formal action of its legislature, meeting in February. He personally strongly favors statehood, and believes the legislature might request him to so petition Congress.

OBITUARY

MRS. PHILIP NAGELSMITT

Elizabeth Catherine Nauman, a resident of Lee county over 50 years, was born on July 10, 1846 and passed to her final reward on Jan. 2, 1934 at her home at Walnut, having reached the age of 87 years 5 months and 22 days.

When six years old she came to America with her parents. They settled in the vicinity of Perkins Grove where she joined the Evangelical church at the age of eleven. Throughout her entire life she remained a most faithful member of the church.

On Jan. 27, 1866 she was united in marriage with Philip Nagelsmitt, who preceded her in death four years. Six children were born to this happy union, of which one died in infancy. It was soon after her marriage that she and her husband moved onto a farm near Ohio, Ill. where they lived many years. After having moved here she united with the Red Oak church. It was her delight to teach Sunday school classes and to be of service in her church. She was ever interested in all of the interests of the church and for a number of years was president of the Missionary society of which she was made a life member several years ago.

Her life was one of sacrifice and service for others. In her younger days she was often called to minister to the sick and suffering. Her life of kindly deeds will long be remembered by relatives and friends.

Her last illness was of short duration. Her going was like a sheaf of ripe wheat gathered in its time and her soul took its flight to meet the God and Savior who had been her strength and help all her life.

She leaves to mourn her passing her five devoted children, Mrs. Carrie LaRoche and Mrs. Julia Winger of Walnut, Mrs. Mary Ioder of Dixon and Henry Nagelsmitt and Mrs. Clara Boettcher of Mendota, also nine grand children, twelve great grandchildren and many other relatives and friends.

Servant of God well done, Thy glorious warfare passed; The battle fought, the victory won, And thou art crowned at last.

—Selected

Nobly thy course is run— Splendor is round it! Bravely thy fight is won— Victory crowned it.

In thy warfare of heav'n Grown old and hoary, Thou'rt like the summer sun, Shrouded in glory.

Trend of U. S. National Debt

Spending on the vast scale planned by President Roosevelt for 1934-35 will raise the national debt in 1935 to an all-time high of approximately $32 billion, as shown by this chart, giving the course of the debt since 1913. An unprecedented peak was reached on Aug. 31, 1919, few months after close of the World War, when the debt was $26,594,000,000. Then it fell, until on June 30, 1930, it had dropped to $16,185,000,000. Then came the new climb, in which it has soared far past the high mark of the immediate post-war period. From 1905 to 1915, it was almost stationary, around the one billion mark.

WALGREEN FOR BIGGER PUBLIC WORKS PROGRAM

He Favors Expansion of Federal Projects: For Sales Tax

Charles J. Gotthart, Jr., financial writer for the Chicago Herald and Examiner, this morning had the following story concerning the view of Charles R. Walgreen, head of the great drug company which bears his name and a director of the Dixon National bank.

President Roosevelt's recovery efforts have been strikingly successful principally because the greatest share of the government funds is going to labor and is immediately converted into purchasing power.

This program, augmented by the natural uplift in business, is being reflected in improvement in nearly every field of commerce, according to Charles R. Walgreen, drug store operator.

"A tremendous amount of good has already been accomplished," he said. "Much more could be attained through adoption of a national road building and widening program and improvement in our airway system. The bulk of the funds would go directly for labor."

Favors Road Program
Mr. Walgreen advocates adoption of a federal manufacturers' sales tax of perhaps 5 per cent to finance the government's program.

Such a tax, he said, would yield millions of dollars and provide the most painless form of taxation possible. Unlike the personal property tax, which is termed a burden on the consumer, the sales tax, if life exempted, would be paid when purchasers could afford it. Additionally, it would be comparatively simple to collect.

Hails Sales Tax
The Illinois occupational tax of 2 per cent, he pointed out, has been "practically forgotten" and has proved to be a good source of revenue.

Mr. Walgreen has other ideas on taxation which, he states, may appear to be revolutionary but which will be adopted eventually. One is a larger inheritance tax. The government, he said, is entitled to a "substantial share" of a millionaire's estate.

Out of these augmented government funds, Mr. Walgreen believes a retirement pension should be paid every working man and woman in the country at perhaps the age of fifty.

Following the recent report showing sharp increases in sales for December and the full year, 1933, Mr. Walgreen said the company's sales thus far in January are maintaining a substantial lead over the corresponding period a year ago.

Married Flirts

BEGIN HERE TODAY
GYPSY MORELL and TOM WEAVER are married the same day as LILA HOTALING and PERKIE BLISS. Lila expects to live in luxury, but Gypsy intends to keep her job, teaching in a settlement house.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER VII

SOMEONE turned on the radio and the sound of jazz blared through the big room. Hilda Blanchard held out her arms to someone—was it Tom?—and began to dance.

Hilda was in red—flame red, and her little black curls, feathering all over her small head, gave her a slightly Grecian air. She, like Lila, affected an unearthly pallor and her lips were like a geranium slash in her pallid face. She hung on Tom. She was, Gypsy observed, almost as tall as he: while she, Gypsy, was smaller, reached only to his shoulder.

Under her laughter, her civilized air of casualness, the most primitive of all emotions began to stir—that of jealousy. It was unreasonable, she admitted it. It was mad. It was utterly without foundation. Why, she had never laid eyes on this girl before in her life, and neither had Tom. Yet, from the first moment of entering the room, she had felt a wholly foolish and feminine sensation of distrust. Hilda had liked Tom at sight, that much was certain.

"You can tell. A wife can tell," said Gypsy to herself with all the wisdom of her 22 years. Meanwhile she chattered and nodded her head: said "absolutely!" with emphasis, although she hadn't the faintest notion what Derek wanted her to agree with. Her head was in a whirl. It was all very well, she thought, for Tom to behave nicely to this girl: that was part of being a guest. But he needn't act as though she were the only person in the room. He didn't even glance to see if she (Gypsy) were having a good time: how she was faring. And they had been married only a little more than two months! Why it was monstrous! It was unbelievable!

Gypsy thought that Derek glanced at her rather oddly. She tried to collect her thoughts, to attend to what he was saying.

"... I beg your pardon. I'm afraid I didn't hear that. The music is so loud."

"Awful," agreed Derek. "Can't hear myself think. I'll turn it down. I just said it was time for Marko to be here, if he's coming at all."

HE left her with a murmured excuse to adjust the dial of the instrument, and Gypsy was left with the disturbing news. Marko Broughton was coming, after all!

Yet somehow the thought did not seem quite so disquieting, so disagreeable, now, as it had some hours before. Marko had been in her life with her a year ago—or so he had said. Marko had wanted her to marry him, ignoring the great disparity in their ages. Marko was 50, very rich, commanding. He was that character of stage and drama and downtown life, a financier. The thought of marrying Marko had seemed preposterous to Gypsy, and she had said as much to Lila, who had introduced him to her.

"Don't pay any attention to her," Lila said, "She's a cat!"

"Why, you little goose, he's worth millions," she remembered Lila had said, indulgently. "What on earth are you thinking of?"

Yes, there had been, decidedly, a tone of envy in Lila's voice. Lila hadn't been able to understand Gypsy's choice of a handsome, penniless youngster like Tom Weaver. Derek was one of Marko's many young men—and Lila hoped that great things were to come of his association with Broughton & Co. This apartment, all these things (which seemed such luxury to Gypsy and Tom) were, in Lila's mind, mere stepping stones in a rich man's career.

And now Marko was coming. Gypsy would meet him for the first time since she had been Tom Weaver's wife!

For Tom's sake, she had hoped Marko would not turn up. Tom hated the very idea of the "rich old man" who had wanted Gypsy for his own. But now, looking at Hilda, at the possessive way her scarlet-tipped hand curled itself around Tom's black collar, Gypsy decided she was glad he was coming. Let Tom worry! Let him be jealous, too.

The orchestra music came to a pause, and the announcer's voice, disagreeably nasal, came through: "Now I want to tell all our friends about the wonderful prize offered by the Blank Soap Company is making... a sterling silver spoon set—so lovely, free..."

"Shut it off... Isn't that dreadful... stop dancing, you two, I can't bear it..." Simultaneously with Derek's clicking off of the music, a slight commotion ensued. Koto, bowing and smiling as a slave before a potentate, ushered Marko into the room!

Marko had made a good entrance. Trust him for that! Gypsy smiled to herself at that thought. Hilda, one of those predatory looking, scarlet-tipped hands of hers still clinging to her partner's coat sleeve, stared a him interestedly. Lila greeted the great man prettily. Her manner was a deft blend of respect and comradeship.

"You know everybody but Hilda Blanchard, I think, Marko. And, oh yes, Tom Weaver."

MARKO'S bright, steel-gray eyes, under their commanding brows, went from face to face. "Gypsy!" He was all cordiality. "They didn't tell me I was to see you. But how splendid!"

He shook hands with Tom, after a keen glance. Marko was not in the least the "old man" Gypsy would meet him for the first time since she had been Tom Weaver's wife!

For Tom's sake, she had hoped Marko would not turn up. Tom hated the very idea of the "rich old man" who had wanted Gypsy for his own. But now, looking at Hilda, at the possessive way her scarlet-tipped hand curled itself around Tom's black collar, Gypsy decided she was glad he was coming. Let Tom worry! Let him be jealous, too.

The orchestra music came to a pause, and the announcer's voice, disagreeably nasal, came through: "Now I want to tell all our friends about the wonderful prize offered by the Blank Soap Company is making... a sterling silver spoon set—so lovely, free..."

"Shut it off... Isn't that dreadful... stop dancing, you

The latter endearment was directed at the great visitor. Gypsy was amused. Apparently "darling" meant nothing on earth to Lila. She called her friends, her husband, her husband's boss, all by the same affectionate term. The fine old Anglo-Saxon word, sacred to lovers down the ages, was the merest scrap of courtesy. Hilda sat on a pouf in Lila's room and smoked a hasty cigaret while the others renewed make-up and talked in the vague fashion women affect when they are absorbed in their personal appearances.

Young Mrs. Wiltford Gypsy thought eminently likeable. She was a rosy young woman with prematurely gray hair and bright blue eyes. She turned cordially to Gypsy.

"My dear, you must come to see me. I should love it. Come in for tea next week, won't you?"

Gypsy explained lightly that she had a job.

"Oh, you write or paint or something, isn't that it?"

"No, it's kindergarten work, at a settlement," Gypsy explained. She felt self-conscious, with Hilda's critical eyes upon her. Hilda was measuring her frankly and coolly, in a disconcerting fashion.

"How very interesting!" Hilda contributed, in a drawing voice, at this juncture of the conversation. She rubbed her half-smoked cigaret out in an alabaster tray and stood up, stretching herself in feline fashion.

"Come along," Lila interposed. "They'll be shouting for us, we're dawdling so."

SHE took Gypsy's arm. As they went downstairs, she said in a low voice: "Don't pay any attention to her. She's a bit of a cat. Hilda is."

Gypsy held her head high, fastening the collar of cream fur around her throat. The jibe had made her dark eyes brighter than ever. Marko crossed the room to stand at her side.

"You're lookin' sweet, my child," he said, in a throaty undertone. "How's life treatin' you?"

Gypsy could see Tom watching her. She smiled at Marko dazlingly and said softly that life was splendid, thanks so very much. And how was he? Tom could not hear the words, but he saw the smile and saw, too, the warm clasp Marko maintained on Gypsy
